

I don't understand why the FCC, by considering petition 04-160, should put limitations on a valuable service that is available on XM-radio. I listen to XM every day and willingly pay a monthly fee to do so. It is especially nice when traveling across the country. I know that I can listen to what I want, where I want, be it news, weather, or music, without searching for local stations that have what I want. Especially news and information, which on local stations is usually only available hourly or occasionally on the half hour, I know I can get it. If I make the choice to pay for a service, I don't feel that it is right to have that service restricted by regulations designed to benefit a few companies at the expense of the listening public. Thank you for your consideration.
